Suggestion on how to quote this paper:

Schwartz, Adriana. (2016). Editorial. Revista Española de Ozonoterapia. Vol. 6, nº 1, pp. 3-4.

Doing a bit of history, I remember with nostalgia and affection the issue number zero of the Spanish Journal of Ozone Therapy published in May 2010, which was born with great enthusiasm and desire.

In May 2011 we published the number 1 and since then up to today May 2016, without failure we have been fulfilling our annual appointment, incorporating scientific advances related to ozone therapy and maintaining a high scientific level.

The journal has carved his way with great effort and professionalism making deservedly earn a place in the world of the science.

It has been published for free 6 issues and 5 supplements (issue number 0 is not counted) with original high-impact scientific contents, in English and Spanish, faithfully respecting all international standards. It has been arduous tasks, which involved lot of time, dedication, energy, effort, wisdom, know-how and of course love for the therapy we use.

Noteworthy is the lack of the journal. All the work of editing and of peer review is free, which has tremendous merit, because the time, knowledge and energy involved is huge.

The Journal Presents in the History of Ozone Therapy

I would like to emphasize that the journal has been a faithful witness of many events that have marked the recent history of ozone therapy.

It witnessed the birth of the unique global reference document and of unmatched weight, the "Madrid Declaration on Ozone Therapy" and later on of its 2nd edition issued in June 2015, translated into 7 languages, which it has had a tremendous reception and unparalleled success.

The journal was present at the founding of ISCO3 (International Scientific Committee of Ozone Therapy); and the election of its new members for the period 2015-2020. ISCO3 continues publishing reference documents with more scientific force even more vigorously.

He also participated at the birth of the International Library of Ozone Therapy, unique in its kind, bringing together more than 2,000 documents in their original languages.

The journal contemplated the congress of IMEOF (International Medical Ozone Federation) held in Havana (Cuba) last November 2015 marking a milestone in the history of ozone therapy in every way.
